

SICA, the Shore Institute for Contemporary Arts, 20 Third Ave., Long Branch, will present an exhibit, "Architects Without Architecture," from Jan. 11-Feb. 22. Opening reception is on Jan. 13, 3-6 p.m. Noting that the recent output of many architects today is growing further from what many would consider to be traditional "architecture", curator Trent Welcome has chosen to illustrate his observation through this exhibition. He has assembled some of the top names in the field who are spreading the boundaries and the very definition of architecture. Shown here is "Fleshologically Transparent ++Rand($x)" by Nicholas Pisca. For more information on SICA, visit www.sica.org.
